Organize a law abiding and peaceful protest at the capital in Juneau. Request that you want all of your federal Congresspeople and US Senators to object in both lower & upper houses and request that they "fight for Trump" in parliament.

As for money, yes $2,400 is a lot, especially after Coronavirus broke down a lot of our small businesses and bank accounts. To be honest, going to DC takes far more than that- in fact you shouldn't go unless you have a separate emergency fund equal to the TOTAL cost of your trip! In case flights get cancelled due to weather, hotel sellouts, or other unexpected issues.

If you are going to do this, I'd say you need to budget about $100 for yourself for a hotel for one night in Juneau. Put an ad on Craigslist to pay someone $400 to film your protest, do a few minor edits, and put it onto Social Media for you (contractually obligated to go right home and do the edits, and publish it within a few hours after the event is ended), then budget up to $500 in pizza and beer for some of the protestors after 2 hours of high energy, peaceful protest. So you are out $1,000(ish) and done far more than just getting 1 person in DC.

Can you live with yourself if you don't make the trip? You are the one who has to decide. You are too far to drive. What is Sarah Palin doing, she needs to organize Alaskan representation.

I'll live with myself, sure. I don't live with regrets. I feel this guilt, though, because I have the ability to go and make it happen it just will take a big sacrifice. Every time I see a post about "no excuses" and shit I just think about the guy who posted from Texas and said, "a ticket is 250 bucks, how can I not?" Or the guy from NY who can ride a bus for $40.

It's like flying from Europe to DC for one day. I'll look into Juneau, that's an idea. Kind of funny, though. The capital is around several hundred miles round trip from Fairbanks.

Living in Alaska has its highs and its lows. Be safe what ever you decide to do. I remember when the Alaskans wrote in a Senators name because they did not like the GOP pick. You will find friends I am sure.

But that is just me.

I was able to find a flight from Fairbanks to BWI and back for $566, but you depart on January 5, and the return flight is on January 9 and you arrive in Fairbanks on January 10.

Also, look into hacker fares - for instance, you find a flight from Fairbanks to Seattle (or some other city), then try Southwest Airlines or Spirit from Seattle to DC. Southwest has $143 one-way flights to and from Seattle. Might be worth it

Alaska Airlines. Also, you don't need to fly into DCA; you can fly into IAD or BWI, it's just not as close to the city and you'll need to arrange transportation (BWI - you can take the MARC - a commuter train - I believe).

I was able to find 808 dollars for a flight, then I'd need transportation and a place to stay. I reckon it'd be 1000 dollars minimum, because I'd have to get a ride from the airport even if I packed some salmon jerky and other food.

Double down...

1. Smoke and package 150# of wild caught Alaskan salmon (Aka: Squaw Candy)
2. Sell to hungry pedes on 1/06/2021
3. Pays for tickets and hotel
4. Reap huge profits and start new business
5. Repeat at every Trump Rally from 2020-2024

Worst case scenario: You have spent half of your savings but you have freezer full of questionable salmon.

Try looking on justfly.com for cheap flights. Then think about possibly juggling around the airports. Maybe fly in to Chicago for a cheaper flight and drive from there look up cheap rental cars. We do lots of road trips... Thousands of miles and go cheap that way. Maybe there's a pede you could meet up with and ride with. If you have no dependents... Man... Id figure out the ramifications later and take the risk to go.

I think the local capital protests will actually get more media coverage. It's certain the MSM will ignore the DC march, the bigger it is, the more of a blackout. One voice in the sea of a million will be hard to distinguish, in a smaller group its effect can be multiplied. It doesn't matter where, it matters that you do something.

Reach out and network and make as many contacts as possible - that is often how great things begin ...

I'm feeling guilty because making this trip is infinitely important to me and this country, and the amount of money I have now is fine for what I'm doing. Making this trip just puts all of that into question & laces everything with uncertainty. My contention is that my participation will have such a minuscule impact on the outcome (Trump will win) with such a huge impact on my financial situation.
